

William the Monkey
(Words and Music by Mark Wesling)

William was a monkey and very serious
His attention to detail was always a plus
He would mull over ideas for several days
And look at each option in so many ways

His dress was quite formal and he always wore a vest
If there was one loose thread, you would dare not jest
His tie was made of silk and his suit all wool
And his shoes always shiny and never dull

He wore spectacles that were a hundred years old
And a thick black scarf whenever it was cold
He'd walk each morning to the corner newsstand
To get coffee and a paper was always his plan

He'd see buildings and skylines and so many doors
Filling people with ideas galore
So many directions he could go
Each an opportunity to increase what he'd know

He'd pull everything together all in his head
And make a decision when everything was said
A choice made from logic and observation
Carefully made could be so much fun

Then he'd sit back and watch his ideas take shape
And realize that he wasn't such an ape
With our minds we can do almost anything
From inventions to cures our minds will bring

Oh, you can do anything
From inventions to cures your minds will bring
Just keep your minds focused on your own goals
You can do anything no matter how old you are
